SUCCESS WITH DAHLIAS is assured to all by giving them their simple requirements. Any kind of soil, if not fairly rich, make it so, and thoroughly prepare it. Plant tubers flat and about 5 inches deep, any time in May or June. Give thorough cultivation, never allowing the ground to crust after a rain or watering. Do not allow more than one or two shoots to grow; remove others. When buds form leave the first or terminal bud, and remove the next two pair of shoots and as the lower branches develop, disbud those in the same way. This gives you fine big flowers, on good stems from beginning to frost. Work the ground deeply at first, but when they commence to bloom, only stir the surface about 2 inches deep to prevent crust forming.

Do not water too often, but when you do water, do it thoroughly, two buckets to a plant, or if possible, let the hose run lightly all night. When flowers grow smaller, give top dressing of any kind of manure or good fertilizer.
